According to the Act on Inland Navigation and Inland Ports port management implies activities of monitoring and recording the port traffic, ensuring continuity of port activities, reception of waste, faecal, bilge and greasy oil water from vessels and supervision over carrying out the port activities, regular maintenance of port infrastructure and management of public water property in the port area.

The expected benefit from being a part of the project consortium is improvement of port management and port development procedures applied in Croatia through using the best practices, guidelines, recommendations and IT tools which will be developed within the DAPhNE project. logistics services as their upper Danube counterparts. By providing input to the project outputs, regarding the situation faced by the Croatian ports and port users, PAV contributes to the development of more relevant DAPhNE outputs that will have a bigger impact when applied at regional level.
