

My name is Betty and I come from China. Five years ago, I came to Austria with my family to find a better educational environment for my two boys. My children loved Styria so much that we decided to settle down in Graz. I'm very happy to say that after five years of studying in Secondary School, my elder son passed the Matura (A-levels) and started his studies at the Technical University in Vienna.

In January this year, I've begun my German-course at Caritas Academy. It's really a good chance for me. If I had known before that there are free courses, I could have started earlier. But it is never too late. During my studying here, I've received a lot of help from all the teachers and I've benefited a lot for my daily life. I wish more women knew about such excellent courses that are free of charge. I think the Danube Compass will be of great help in providing people with substantial information.
