

My name is Adina and I studied psychology at the University of Bucharest. I have many years of experience in international non-profit organizations and came to the Czech Republic 17 years ago. On my arrival in the Czech Republic in 2001, there was no information for migrants available other than the official information of the Ministry of Interior provided in the Czech language. To obtain any information regarding the legalization of residence was difficult, not only for me, but also for my future husband who is a citizen of the Czech Republic.

Definitely, I welcome the Danube Compass as a comprehensive information tool that accurately includes what newcomers to the Czech Republic need.
