Which suggestions would you like to share?

- Since a lot of theoretical knowledge is taught, maybe even more intense work with practical work & examples
- More playful and / or more group work, selforganized work, in order to lighten up the topic
- Less info
- More independent exercises + less "monologues" from the lecturer (too much input)
- More group work, not so much "telling"
- Examples (more playful)
- Make examples shorter
- More time, as much content was mediated in a morning

RESUME and LESSONS LEARNED from DLP Graz

Implementation / Adaptation of modules

- Modules 1 and 4: it was necessary to create a very low-threshold approach and to ensure that a common understanding of social innovation, social entrepreneurship and business model canvas was established.
- E-learning modules: for young people who had no previous experience with e-learning programs, it was necessary to develop the content under tutorial supervision.
- E-learning modules: The students with school education with economic focus already had basic knowledge in the field of digital competence. For these students it was a good opportunity to boost (intensify, deepen, increase) their basic knowledge.

Target groups

- Due to the timetable organization, schools have preferred to choose individual modules. In schools the implementation of the entire learning program is more difficult due to structural obstacles.
- The apprentice training manager defined the Dynamic Learning Package as a valuable addition to the training and further education planning. That's why they made it possible for apprentices to complete the entire learning program.

Lessons learned for teachers and trainers

- The contents of social innovation and social entrepreneurship were also largely new for teachers and trainers. Thus, it was possible to ensure that those responsible for education continued to develop themselves with new contents.

- The program made them aware that these modules enabled young people to recognize skills that they have little access within their school system or apprenticeship so far.
- Teachers and trainers have realized that there is a need to create more access to entrepreneurial skills development for young people during their education or the apprenticeship in order to ensure that the future can be created entrepreneurially and socially.

Certificates

- Young people were enthusiastic about the DLP modules and were proud of their certificates, which documented their performance. It's not about competition - it's about personal performance and development additionally to the formal structure of the school/apprenticeship system.

Sustainability

- The project succeeded in ensuring that all involved persons like LIAG, young people, teachers and trainers are convinced that it is still urgently necessary for young people to continue with these activities, which were developed in the NewGenerationSkills project.
- At the strategic level, there are already some commitments that future strategic planning should include this content.
- After completing the project, there are no specific assignments for immediate continuation.
